| Barrel (bbl) | A barrel of oil is equal to 159 liters, 42 US gallons or 35 imperial gallons. It is the common measurement for oil reserves, oil shipments, and oil transactions.   |
| Brent        | Brent is the benchmark used for the light oil market in Europe, Africa, and the Middle East, originating from oil fields in the North Sea between the Shetland Islands and Norway.  |
| Crude Oil    | A naturally occurring, unrefined petroleum product composed of hydrocarbon deposits and other organic materials. A type of fossil fuel, crude oil can be refined to produce usable products such as gasoline, diesel and various forms of petrochemicals. |
| Solana       | A blockchain platform designed to host decentralized applications.  |
| WTI          | West Texas Intermediate (WTI), also known as light sweet crude, is a benchmark for oil prices in the U.S., and is often used in indexing other types of oil. WTI is one of the main three benchmarks in oil pricing, along with Brent and Dubai Crude.    |

General Overview

Oil is one of the most liquid assets in the traditional financial markets. Brent and WTI futures are traded 20-25 times more heavily than the quantity of oil produced every day.

Unlike traditional reserve assets such as gold which have limited true function in terms of driving global economic activity, oil is the single most critical commodity for the continuous functioning of the global economy.

Crude oil serves as the core driver for multiple-mission critical global products such as gasoline, diesel fuel, jet fuel, plastics, and countless specialty chemicals. As a result of oil's utility, it is likely to remain a driving force for global business, especially as economically developing populations become more voracious consumers and advancing horizontal drilling and completion technology helps ensure that the price of oil stays competitive with alternative forms of energy.

World oil demand growth is set to accelerate from 840 thousand barrels per day in 2024 to 1.1 million barrels per day next year, lifting consumption to 103.9 mb/d in 2025. Increases in both years will be dominated by petrochemical feedstocks, while demand for transport fuels will continue to be constrained by behavioural and technological progress. While non-OECD demand growth, notably in China, has slowed markedly, emerging Asia will continue to lead gains in 2024 and 2025<sup>[1]</sup>.
